Printing issue support

Student Support | LIB-SVC-207

Check the print job

Before sending a document again, check the device print queue. A stalled job can remain queued even when no paper appears at the printer. Repeated submissions may produce unwanted duplicate copies.

Check the printer

Read the printer display for a paper, supply or connection error. Do not open a restricted service panel. If the printer is shared, note its location or asset label so the correct device can be identified.

Describe the fault

Distinguish a job that never arrived from blank output, unreadable output or a paper jam. Record the time, device label and error message. Keep the contents of a private document out of the request summary.

Request assistance

Open New ticket at /tickets/new/ and enter a short Request summary. For example: Library printer reports a paper jam. The summary must be 120 characters or fewer.

Question about a printing charge

Create a separate request that identifies the charge date and the issue in a short summary. A support ticket records the question; it is not a payment, refund or print-job release.

Track the request

Open Your tickets at /tickets/ and select the ticket to view its status. Close the request after the issue no longer requires attention.
